THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON:

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and times larger than that of any other paper in the city. As a local NEWS paper and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

It is desirable that the litigation over the A. MESSES, JAQUES & MARCUS OF NEW YORK title to part of the land improved in the reciamation of the Potomac flats should be terminated as speedily as possible. But the situation | CHOICEST EXAMPLES OF THEIR PRODUC is not such as to justify the proviso, attached by TIONS, AND THEY INVITE ALL THOSE WHO the House committee to the appropriation for ARE INTERESTED IN RARE STONES AND EXcontinuing this work, that no part of the ap- QUISITE WORKMANSHIP TO INSPECT THIS propriation shall be expended until the suit has been tried in the lower court with a decision favorable to the government. This action gives undue importance to the Kidwell claims, and attaches undue significance to a decision, which, on the principle that the impossible always happens, might come from the District court that there is some substance to these claims. Every lawyer who has examined the subject for the government, whether a representative of the Department of Justice or a member of the Senate or House committee dealing with the question, has satisfied himself that there is no foundation for this claim of title. It might be perfectly safe to make a continuation of the flats improvement dependent upon the defeat of the Kidwell cisim, but why should it be made thus dependent? What logical connection is there between the suit and the appropriation? When the suit was authorized to settle this title, it was provided by the same act that, if the claim of title was sustained, the land was to be viewed as condemned by the government as of a date prior to the improvement, and damages were to be awarded by the same court to the Kidwell claimants representing the value of their land at the same date, before any improvements whatever had been made And in excess of precaution Congress has provided concerning various appropriations for flats reclamation that no part of the money shall be expended upon the land concerning the title to which there is dispute. So that the situation is this. There does not seem to be one chance in a hundred for shaking the title of the government to a foot of the ground. If, however, the Kidwell claim is sustained, the same court which sustains it must give damages to the claimants representing the value of the property before this improvement was begun, when the lots were waterlots and confessedly almost worthless. The provise suggested by the House committee ought to act as a spur to hasten the speedy trial of the litigation, but the Poto mae improvement upon which so much has already been spent ought to Le hastened to completion without any reference to the law's delays and uncertainties in respect to a suit which, however, it may result, is not, as Mr. Toots would say, "of the slightest consequence." In the flate reclamation and in other respects the Potomae should be made in the immediate future the scene of some of the greatest public improvements for the benefit of the capital. The present Long Bridge with the obstructions to the flow of the river which it offers should be removed. New bridges across the Potomac should be built and the harbor should be deepened. The health and business of the city will both be benefited by these improvements. The reclaimed flats should be so guarded at the onter edge as to serve as a wall to the lower city against floois. The removal of the Long bridge dam and the deepening of the channel will also aid in the protection of the city against invasion by the Potomac.

It is to be feared that the clergy is becoming pessimistic. The Rev. Dr. Parkhurst of New York charges that vice in that city is encouraged by those who should feel it a duty to suppress it. Another Manhattan clergyman, the Rev. Thomas Dixon, whose ideas are con sidered of sufficient importance to be scattered by telegraph, declares that "there is some thing radically rotten at the heart of civiliza tion itself." A Washington minister attacks the present business system and declares that under it no man can take an active part in commercial centers and be a Christian. Each of these speakers presents facts and arguments to support his position and the effect is to create an impression that mankind is to a very bad way, notwithstan-ling the progress in morals and intelligence that the world is gen erally conceded to have made. It is a repet? tion of the old struggle to bring practice to the plane of theory; to make the real respond to the requirements of the ideal. It has never yet been completely accomplished, and the fact that this generation does not achieve a great deal more than has ever before been done should not overwheim it with scorn and condemnation. It is a tribute to the comparative purity of the times that the evils of the day are deemed to be sufficiently met by ridicule and caricature, or by eccasional vigorous scoldings from the pulpit. The conditions which gave birth to the great satirists which demanded for instance, the warning, threatening figure and withering words of a Javenal no longer

The kaiser has not decided to accept Chan cellor Caprivi's relignation, if indeed it be true that he has resigned, and seems disposed to have him remain in office. It would embarrass his imperial majesty to find a successor, since Miquel, the best man differs from the laiser in policy, and Waidersce, perhaps the next in order, is not acceptable to Russia and might, if appointed, hasten hostilities with that country. The fact, too, of two chancellers going out of office since his reign began would be construed unfavorably to the stability of the kaiser's government. William is a "pulverizer" in speeches, but when it comes to action he has some respect for public opinion in Europe generally, as well as in Germany. Candidate Hill commits himself very fully on "past politics," the late Edward A. Freeman's deficition of history. The old Norse mythology located the well of the past under an ash tree. Mr. Hill seems to locatefit under the democratic party of former days and to draw from it in apparent lack of inspiration from the present democratic party and its issues an abundance of water which some people are fastidious enough to think brackish Children should not be admitted to crimical
